

Public Health Wales statement on Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak

This statement will be updated daily at 11am

Updated: 11am Wednesday 18 March 2020

Dr Robin Howe, Incident Director for the Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak response at Public Health Wales, said:

"Thirteen new cases have tested positive for Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) in Wales, bringing the total number of confirmed cases to 149 - although the true number of cases is likely to be higher.

"As has been reported previously, two people in Wales who tested positive for Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) have died.

"Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) is now circulating in every part of Wales. For this reason, we will not be reporting cases by local authority area from today. From tomorrow, we will update daily at 12 noon the case numbers by health board of residence.

"Wherever you live, members of the public should follow the latest public health advice, which was updated on Monday 16 March."

The updated guidance is:

- People who live with others should stay at home for 14 days if they, or anyone in their household, has either a high temperature or a new and continuous cough
- People who live alone should stay at home for seven days if they develop a high temperature or a new and continuous cough
- Everyone should avoid non-essential contact with others and unnecessary travel
- Everyone being asked to work from home where they possibly can, and avoid pubs, clubs, theatres and social venues
- People over 70, and vulnerable groups of any age will be asked within days to be shielded from social contact for several weeks

Dr Robin Howe said: "People no longer need to contact NHS 111 if they think they may have contracted Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19).

"People with a fever or persistent cough should stay at home for seven days if they live alone, or 14 days if they live with others. Anyone who lives with someone displaying coronavirus symptoms should also stay at home for 14 days. They should not go to a GP surgery, pharmacy or hospital.

"They should only contact NHS 111 if they feel they cannot cope with their symptoms at home, their condition gets worse, or their symptoms do not get better after seven days.

"The public play an important role in the 'delay' phase. By following the latest advice, you will protect yourself, protect the most vulnerable, and delay and flatten the peak, which will reduce the pressure on NHS Wales and minimise the impact of the virus.

"We continue to undertake priority testing in Wales. We are working closely with health boards, NHS 111 and the Welsh Government to develop systems so that NHS Wales and members of the public have appropriate access to Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) testing."
